PLEADS FOR TROOPS

Gen. Daggett Before Browns-ville Military Court.

HOLDS DISCHARGE IS UNJUST

Cites Dictionary to Prove Punishment of Negroes Over Shooting Affray Was Inconsistent and Asks for Their Reinstatement at the Hearing of Argument in Case.

"What is law without justice?" "Law without justice is a wound without a cure."

It was with these quotations that Brig. Gen. A. S. Daggett, U. S. A., retired, began his argument before the military court of inquiry in the Brownsville investigation. His appeal on behalf of the discharged men did not prove effective in influencing the verdict, but it is, nevertheless, regarded as a strong argument.

In concluding his address to the court, he spoke as follows: "It has been claimed that the discharge of these men 'without honor' was not a punishment, but simply a removal of bad men from the army. What is punishment? The Century Dictionary says: 1. 'The infliction of pain or chastisement.' 2. Pain, suffering, loss, confinement, or other penalty inflicted on a person for a crime or offense by the authority to which the offender is subject."

"Pain, suffering, let us consider these first. It may be mental or corporal pain or suffering or both. These men were charged with committing, or concealing knowledge of, an atrocious crime. It was a crime that would brand the perpetrators with infamy and follow them and their families forever. They were 'discharged without honor' for this crime 'by the authority to which the offender is subject.' Men can endure the loss of fortune, friends, families, and life itself; they cannot bear disgrace. How much better it would have been for them if they had been killed in battle! Some of these men had served their country long and faithfully and honorably. They had endured hardship and exposed their lives in battle. They were looking forward, as they had a right to, to an honorable retirement, and a happy home during the remainder of their lives.

"Every member of this court has held a commission in the volunteer service. Which one would not rather have been killed in battle or any other way than to have been 'discharged without honor'? And yet it has been claimed that these soldiers have not been punished."

"But the definition of punishment includes the word 'loss.' One of these men would have been entitled to retire in less than two years on a comfortable support for himself and family. At an advanced age of life, with a family to support, unaccustomed to the ways of earning a living in civil life, he is thrown out on the cold mercies of the world.

"Others, with various periods of services, looking forward to the same privileges, suffered the same treatment. And yet it has been claimed that they were not punished.

"Guiteau claimed that he did not murder President Garfield, but simply 'removed' him. But Garfield was dead.

"It was claimed that these soldiers were not punished, only 'removed' (mark the word); but they suffered an infliction worse than death, call it what you will. This does not apply to persons, but is intended to illustrate the occurrence.

"It has been claimed again that the discipline of the army required the discharge of these men 'without honor.' It is fortunate that I am speaking to old army officers on this subject. I think all will agree that the company commander has the best opportunity of any officer in the army to know what discipline is and how to attain it. I signed the morning report book as company commander more than twenty years. It was my variable experience that justice was the foundation of discipline. Where that prevailed there was discipline. Where it failed and favoritism prevailed, there was demoralization. When an officer or man feels that his commanding officer is governed by principles of justice, he will respect and cheerfully obey him, even if he has no loveable personal qualities. On the other hand, if he feels that his commanding officer is governed by impulse and whims, he cannot respect him and obeys reluctantly and mechanically. He will lose interest in the service, and discontent and unrest will prevail. We have all experienced this.

Makes Military Comparison. "I have seen companies in the same garrison, side by side, one in fine condition, the other demoralized. I do not remember of ever conversing with an experienced officer who dissented from this view of discipline. How we sometimes feel the sting of injustice by being deprived of privileges because of the misconduct of others. We have said, punish the guilty, but do not put us on the same footing with them. The greatest stroke for the discipline of the army that could be struck to-day would be to show the army that justice shall be meted out to these men of the Twenty-fifth Infantry. Punish the guilty, if there are any; restore the innocent to all their rights. If no guilty can be found, be governed by the rule of law that a man is innocent till proved guilty. Better that one hundred guilty escape than one innocent man be punished, is the adage. We have no right to punish the innocent with the guilty. No exigency can justify it. We may take property, even life itself, and send a man to a honorable grave; but to destroy a spotless reputation, never! 'Righteousness and justice are the foundation of Thy throne.'

"But suppose some of the soldiers did the shooting; who were they? What individual is there against whom there is a spark of evidence. (Of course, the alleged Conyer's confession is not taken seriously.) One hundred and sixty-seven men were discharged. Some have died, others have not been heard from. For present purposes, assume that 150 desire to be restored to the army. Suppose fifty should be recommended for restoration. Suspicion would then rest on the remaining 100. Suppose 100 should be restored. Then suspicion would rest more heavily on the remaining fifty. Suppose 140 should be restored. Then suspicion would be concentrated on the remaining ten. Suppose any or all these remaining ten should be innocent. What a monstrous wrong would be done them! What individual, what government would be willing to be responsible for such an inflection?

"It is very important for these men that they be restored to duty. But it is more important for the army that innocent men may rest in the consciousness that they will not be thrown out suddenly and disgraced forever. It is still more important for the country. It cannot afford to stand sponsor for the errors of its servants, however well intentioned they may have been. It shows the nobility of a man to right a wrong. How much more a government!

"Alike, whether it be done upon a nation or a man."

"It is a principle of American and English law that a man is innocent till proven guilty."

"It is an axiom of American and English law that the law will not exact impossibilities."

"It has been said that these men must prove their innocence. Well, what can they do? How shall they do it?"

"Nearly every man in the battalion has testified that he does not know of any soldier who was engaged in the shooting. Tamayo, the Mexican, did not know of any soldier who was engaged in the shooting. The hospital steward, an unbiased witness, did not know of any soldier who participated in the shooting. Where, could they find other witnesses who had any opportunity to know about the shooting? What other evidence was it possible for them to produce? Who can tell them?"

Cites Conyer's Testimony. "At the close of Boyd Conyer's testimony about two months ago, he made a brief statement. On being asked why he should be authorized to enlist, no one will forget his pathetic manner and voice when he said: 'I have done all I can. What more can I do?'

"The appearance of Sergt. Sanders before this court was dignified and convincing. His bearing during the vigorous, violent examination was honest and frank, yet calm and self-contained. Such bearing was born only of truth. He entered the courtroom with a spotless record; he left it with that record illustrious. When he appealed to the court to remove the foul blot from his name, the question arose in my mind with redoubled force, 'What more can be done? The law does not exact impossibilities. And when the final word came that separated Sergt. Sanders and other men of that battalion from the army they loved so well and had served so faithfully, it is strange that they became heartbroken and threw themselves on their bunks and wept like children? Did these expressions of grief flow from murderers' hearts? Arouned by the affecting scenes of that hour, had there been a man possessing knowledge of that crime, he would have imparted it to his officers. 'The honor of these men, dearer than life, is now with this court. It can continue the stigma on these men and their offspring for the present. It can remove the blot wrongfully, even if with good intentions, placed on a clean page. 'If ever there was a case where conscience should control, it is the one now awaiting decision. 'This belongs to that class of questions that will never be settled till settled right. 'The law does not exact impossibilities. What more can they do?'

WASHINGTON HERALD BUREAU, 625 King Street.

Alexandria, Va., April 24.—A branch of the Holy Name Society was organized at Young Men's Sodality Lyceum Hall this afternoon with the election of Walter M. Donnelly, president; Thomas E. Dyson, vice president; P. F. Downey, secretary; S. A. Breen, treasurer.

Meetings were arranged for the first Sunday of every month at Lyceum Hall at 3:30 o'clock. To-day's session was attended by a large gathering of men. The society starts out with a membership of about 300.

An interesting address on aims and objects of the society was made by Rev. John Handley, C. S. P.

Rachel Kaufman, a negro, who says her home is in Washington, is locked up at police headquarters for disorderly conduct. The police this afternoon received a report that Rachel was near a glass factory in the northeastern section of the city and had threatened self-destruction.

A meeting of the committee appointed by the congregation of the Second Presbyterian Church to prepare plans for the remodeling of the present structure at Prince and St. Asaph streets will be held. The proposed improvements will cost approximately $15,000 and include the addition of another story, making the edifice a two-story structure.

J. Frank Ryan died about 4 o'clock this afternoon at his home, 1050 Duke street, after a short illness. He was a son of the late Timothy Ryan, and was about forty years old and unmarried. Mr. Ryan was for years employed as a railroad clerk. Several sisters survive. The arrangements for the funeral have not been made.

The funeral of Edward Cowling, who died Tuesday night last, took place this afternoon from St. John's Episcopal Chapel, West End, west of this city. Services were conducted by Rev. S. A. Wallis, of Episcopal Theological Seminary. Interment was in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

Evangelistic services were begun this evening at Second Presbyterian Church. They are being conducted by Rev. E. T.

Wellford, of Newport News, Va. Services will be held daily at 3 and 8 o'clock. The services will be concluded on May 8.

The body of Maj. Beverly Mason, who died in Washington, was brought here this afternoon and buried in Ivy Hill Cemetery. Members of R. E. Lee Camp, Confederate Veterans, attended the funeral.

Messrs. Edgar Warfield, sr., B. C. Hall, and J. B. Spencer left to-day for Mobile, Ala., to attend the Confederate reunion, which will convene next Tuesday.

At First Baptist Church this morning Rev. W. F. Watson, pastor, took for his subject, 'Imitation of Christ; Forgiveness.' His subject at the evening services was 'Does the door of mercy close with death?'

Mississippi Correspondent Revises a Jumble of Facts.

Mobile corr. Jones County (Miss.) News.

There are several excuses for my news items being slim this week, but the main one is that I can't afford to desecrate the natal day of him of whom it is said he never told a lie. Generally, I can invent news, and could to-day, but in deference to George Washington's Birthday I will not tell anything but the truth. Besides, I went a little too fast last week and the citizens here have been giving me "fits." I wish to correct the rumor regarding the marriage of Mrs. Sallie Windham to a Mr. Morris. This has been found to be absolutely false and entirely without foundation. I am sorry that I was misled by rumor, and trust that no harm or ill feeling will result. Am also informed that it was a mistake about Miss Ethel Shays going to Petal, as reported. Would be glad, Mr. Editor, if you would send a copy of this week's paper (with this item boldly marked) to our Uncle Samuel, as it is rumored that he might make trouble if he happened to see the report that our postmistress was at Petal. In fact, Mr. Editor, there has been so many "kicks" about my last notes, believes I will just save time and deny the truth of all I reported, except that about Dr. Butler and the biscuits. I will not take that back.

Cruiser Starts for China.

Norfolk, April 24.—The armored cruiser New York, bound for Chinese waters, there to succeed the cruiser Charleston as flagship of the Asiatic fleet, to-day sailed from Hampton Roads. The first stop of the cruiser on the way will be at Gibraltar.

Onions Fail to Hatch.

Steeleton, Pa., April 24.—Hiram Moyer, of Marsh Run, adds a new chapter to the story of the thrift of the busy American hen.

One of Mr. Moyer's chickens, a large Rhode Island Red, became broody. Wishing to discourage her ambition, Moyer penned her in the smokehouse. In providing feed during the term of her imprisonment, he added some onions, that there might be variety in diet, at least.

Four days later, when Mr. Moyer opened the smokehouse door to see if his broody hen had forgotten her troubles, he was surprised to see green onion tops intermingled with the red plumage of his prize winner. She had made a nest, and in the absence of eggs had pressed the onions into service.

TRINITY ESTATE AUDITED

Church's Income for a Year Exceeds $800,000.

Balance Sheet Reveals Wealth to Be More Than $14,000,000 of Parish Property.

New York, April 24.—Trinity Church Corporation, the combined assets of which are put at about $14,000,000, had an income in the year ended July 31, last, of $853,230. All but about $110,000 was derived from the real estate holdings of the corporation, according to the annual report.

Trinity spends for the maintenance of her ten churches and nine schools, including such items as church music, the pay of the clergy, repairs to the buildings, supplies, fuel and light, water rents and insurance, $555,517. It was an increase of $15,000 over the expenses for the same items in the year before.

The cost of maintaining the real estate holdings of the parish outside of the churches and schools, amounted to $401,232. It cost the parish $110,000 more in taxes and $15,000 more in insurance to keep its property going than it did the year before. The city taxes and water rates, over what the lessees paid, amounted to $140,705, repairs cost $140,000. The year left the corporation with $26,453.

The balance sheet for the year reveals the wealth of the corporation. The productive property, at the taxed valuation for 1909, is set at $13,638,500. Bonds and mortgages on churches, from which the parish receives no income, amounted to $370,946. The gross assets of Trinity were $14,016,762, and after the deduction of the amounts of notes and other liabilities, left net assets, exclusive of the value of churches, chapels, schools, and burying grounds, amounting to $13,682,592.

Broody Hen Not Discouraged When Banished from Eggs.

TOM TAGGART SEES VICTORY

Claims Two-thirds of Convention Is Pledged to Nominate.

Strength of Opposition May Be Decided After Address Tuesday of Indiana Governor.

Indianapolis, April 24.—With the delegates selected to the State convention in all the counties except Marion, in which they will be chosen in primaries to-morrow evening, Taggart is claiming a total of 1,200, or two-thirds of the entire number, as opposed to the governor's plan to name a candidate for the United States Senate. This claim is based on the belief that he will have practically all of the delegates from this county, a total of 135, but the governor's friends claim that they will elect 55 of the number.

They, therefore, concede to Taggart more than two-thirds of the delegation from the county, though they deny his claim to two-thirds of all the delegates to the convention.

It is estimated that more than 100 of the delegates pledged to vote against the governor were not chosen in Democratic convention, but have become delegates by securing proxies.

No limitations were placed upon the proxies, and, in order that there might be no dispute, they were gotten out in printed form, giving to the holder the right to act on all questions in the convention for and instead of the person who was the duly accredited delegate. It is said that Taggart had 1,000 of the proxies printed and that they have been sent to every county in the State.

Gov. Marshall is said to be depending upon his speech on Tuesday night to arouse the delegates to a sense of their duty, but many of the knowing ones believe that he was too inactive at the start, and that Taggart, profiting by the governor's dilatory methods, has perfected an organization that cannot now be overthrown.

GOV. FORT GOING ABROAD.

Gen. Sadler and Col. Colgate Will Be His Companions.

Trenton, April 24.—Gov. Fort will go to Europe next month for several weeks' rest. He will be accompanied by Col. Austen Colgate, of Orange, his military aid, and Adj. Gen. William F. Sadler, jr., of this city, a close personal friend.

The governor has not completed his plans and has made no public announcement of the trip. In his absence Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, president of the senate, will be acting governor.

Nominate Rival for Diaz.

Mexico City, April 24.—The formal announcement has been made by the anti-re-electionist party that at its national convention, held here, Francisco Madero was nominated for President and Dr. Francisco Vasquez Gomez for Vice President. His new political movement, which has for its object the defeat of the Diaz-Coral ticket, is causing no uneasiness in government circles.
